

The Janesville Gazette.

TUESDAY, APRIL 25, 1865.

Correspondence.

JANESVILLE, April 24, 1865.

Dear Sir.—Believing that the publication of the sermon delivered by you last Sabbath morning in memory of our dear lamented Chief Magistrate, would do good, we respectfully solicit a copy for that purpose.

A. M. Thomson, E. G. Fifield, Amos P. Prichard, J. M. Burgess, R. B. Treat, Levi Alden, Orrin Gurnsey, John C. Bailey, S. J. M. Putnam, and others.

GENTLEMEN.—Yours of yesterday has just been received. If the plain, unstudied words spoken to my people on Sunday last can serve any useful purpose, you are entirely welcome to them. A sermon they can hardly be called. Striking out a single paragraph, which, upon mature consideration seemed irrelevant to the general subject, I transmit them herewith.

Yours Respectfully,

S. FARRINGTON.

Discourse.

Rev. G. A. I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held.

If measured by the number and greatness of its events, rather than by clock or calendar, it is four months or four years, instead of four weeks, since I saw you last. How much has transpired in these grand, terrible, glorious days! How have we been lifted up, and cast down, and our whole soul stirred within us! What light, and what dismay, what hopeful exultation, what depths of grief, what radiant morning, what blackness of night has the nation seen. Richmond taken, Lee surrendered, the President dead, and a new order of things begun in less than twenty days! Truly history is making very fast in our generation.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time;
An age, on ages telling;
To be living is sublime."

There is something very impressive in the eight of a whole nation touched by a common and deep-felt grief. One passing from city to city and from village to village, along a thousand miles from East to West, seeing everywhere the same emblems of a sorrow, which emblems and words alike are impotent to express, seeing tears starting from eyes unused to tears; men everywhere acting as under a sense of personal bereavement, flags at half-mast, bells tolling, solemn processions moving to the wail of martial music—one seeing these things feels as never before the unity of the people, the reality of the national life and heart, and that it is no fictitious bond which binds us in one.

Much of this outward manifestation might indeed appear in the event of any President's decease. The President represents the nation's choice, its executive power, its arm of authority, and he can never fail without eliciting from the people, an expression of respect and regret due the office. A sense of self-respect bids the people recognize fittingly, his removal. Doubtless, a due display of grape and cannone would have been made for either of the corrupt Presidents who preceded this savior of his country. But it would have been mere miller's mourning, the proper drapery of custom, and not, as now, the touching endeavor of the people, to manifest what they so deeply feel.

It was more than the President the people loved, it was the Man. In these last four years how had we all learned to trust him. We have had our times of impatience, our months of murmuring, our seasons when our hearts rebelled at the steady patience of his lead; because our impulses, our heat, our clamorings could not move him to take a single step before the right and fitting time. Invariably we have acknowledged that he was right, and we wrong; that his slowness served the common need far better than our passion would have done. Gradually we had learned to trust him far more than ourselves in these grave problems of state.

We recognized that he would not act from impulse, that he had no pet schemes or theories to carry out, like most ambitious statesmen or wild philanthropists; that he would act when he did act, and move when he did move, in such a manner that we should be satisfied, and with such wisdom that he need not retrace his steps. Very rare and conspicuous was the judicial quality of his intellect.

Added to this confidence which we had learned to put in him, was our appreciation of his naturalness, simplicity, and unselfishness. He had that rare courage which kept him, amid all the conventionalities of court life, the same simple, unostentatious man, who went from Illinois four years ago. He dared to be himself! All through these years he has been impressing it upon the American people, that a single honest heart is more to be depended on than all the politic diplomacy of the universe; until every man of humble place and honest purpose, throughout the land, felt that this simple minded, true-intentioned, straightforward President represented him, and was acting at the highest post in the nation as he himself would desire to act. We were all sure that he had carried the principles of all true manliness—of all true religion, into a place where we had been unaccustomed to see them; that he was giving them the first place, where hitherto it had been supposed impracticable to give them more than some subordinate recognition; that he had placed moral greatness where it naturally belongs, above all other greatness. Politicians, and people generally had too commonly assumed that strict integrity of moral purpose was incompatible with the best diplomacy; that public success is often attainable only through a temporary suppression of the loftiest sentiment and ingenuous methods; that a crooked moral line is the shortest distance between two given points in the real progress of a people. The conspicuous and immortal success of this honest man is a divine revelation to the exact contrary. I am sure that it is, at once, such a revelation as was chiefly needed, and which will be lost, either to the nation or to the world. Henceforth, if we are true to the lesson which God has written in the book of our own life, the cunning political maneuverer will be the second-rate statesman; the honest, ingenuous, morally courageous man, the first. How beautifully has been illustrated in him, that saying of Jesus "Thine eye be single thy whole body shall be full of light." From first to last, amid the most unparalleled temptation, and unprecedented pressure, he has had but a single purpose—to be true, under God, to the life of this people, and at every successive step his career has been more and more luminous, until he has filled the very darkest corner of the land with the true light of life. He trusted God from day to day; did the present duty firmly and fearlessly, and always relied upon God to show him what to do next. There is but one way, oh friends, in which we can properly thank God for the life and memory of Abraham Lincoln; and that is by acting and being like him, as much as ever we can, wherever we are called to act or be. Do we not all know this and feel it? Let it be sure to us then a passing lesson.

I have said that it was more than the President whom the people loved; that they loved the Man. It was more than the Man they loved. In him they loved the Eternal. This deep-seated grief, which has rested upon the faces of all classes of people, has afforded me one of the strongest proofs I ever received of the people's capacity for appreciating those god-like qualities which are the very essence of Christianity—the perennial fountain of divinity in this human world, and the indestructible foundations of religion. We have loved in him the illustration of our noblest, loftiest, dearest ideas. He has been to us an exponent, not more of honesty, than of mercy, liberty, child-like trust in God, and uncompromised wisdom. He embodied our chiefest hope in God. In our first dismay it seemed as if the assassin had struck a blow not so much against a man as against these eternal ideas, as against the life of God. Nor was this far from the truth. It was because he did represent the living God, who is so quick and powerful by his word in the hearts of our people, that the powers of darkness wrought these base Northern traitors to the madness of their deed. They did strike less against flesh and blood than against the living God; the God who lives in you and me; and who, by this bereavement, are we not all conscious of it?—is calling us to a yet grander rally for the maintenance of those undying ideas with which he quickens these people.

It seemed to me friends, last Sunday morning, Easter Sunday morning, the morning when people celebrate the rise of Jesus from the dead, that our national saviour too, slain by the hands of cruel men, had also risen, even as Jesus arose, from the dead. It seemed to me that he was living more truly and gloriously than ever before; that he had found a triumphant resurrection in more than a thousand thousand hearts of living men who loved him; that although as an individual man he had passed out and rested from his labors, yet the great ideas which he so logically represented, and so calmly pursued, were never so strong and vital within us all before; that henceforth by our love of him, by our new necessity from his removal, we felt ourselves bound to stand yet more firmly for that broad-based justice, that lofty mercy, that general freedom, that country undivided, for which he gave himself so manfully, and for which, a martyr he died. That impression concerning his resurrection has not passed away. I still feel and know that in the renewed purpose of our hearts, in the increased unity of the nation, in the augmented loyalty of the land, in an uprising of fidelity to ideas and principles among all this people, our greatest statesmen, our providential and most illustrious man has arisen from all the power of death in a form glorious, incorruptible, whence his counsels shall rule us henceforth from the right hand of God. He went from us only to come more truly unto us. He was taken from men's sight only to take a stronger hold upon their hearts. Blessed be our God, who, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again in this so lively hope, by this last resurrection of the dead.

"Not upon us, or ours, the solemn angel
Hath evil brought!"

The friends of God are glad to say:

"The good die not."

God calls our great ones, but we lose not wholly

What He has given:

They are with us in thought and deed, as truly

As to His Heaven."

There is something very notable in the time in which this death, thus executed, was permitted to take place. Before the first inauguration, there were not wanting those who sought this man's life. At the second inauguration there was a prepared plot to compass his death. All through these years, the same black hatred has been seeking its opportunity to strike him down. Yet, until now, there had been hindrances, combinations of circumstances, various obstacles to prevent his removal from his post. We all perceive that this untimely end is indeed a most timely one; that if he must have been taken thus, at no previous hour could it have happened so well; that had it been four years ago, or four months ago, the disaster would have been incalculable; that there is a mysterious fitness in the time, as well as a blessing in the general result. We each are led to recognize the all-controlling Providence of God. Men everywhere, and of all shades of opinion, recognize it. Yet how differently is it interpreted. Men discern in it what they are capable of discerning. Much is said about this event as a special providence. This comes generally from those who either talk thoughtlessly, or who tacitly assume that God is with a nation only now and then. It is a special providence, but no more special than the descent of yesterday's snow, than the rising of this morning's sun, than my presence with you today. All providences are special. Whatever is, God attends to, and brings to pass, whether it be the germination of a grain of wheat, or the translation of such a man in such a manner. Instead of calling it special, in the sense of occasional, as though God were not always and everywhere present, it would be nearer exactness to call it a prominent or recognizable providence. It is one of those great events which all eyes may behold, and in which every person is interested. It is prominent and special only in its prominence.

It was more than the President the people loved, it was the Man. In these last four years how had we all learned to trust him. We have had our times of impatience, our months of murmuring, our seasons when our hearts rebelled at the steady patience of his lead; because our impulses, our heat, our clamorings could not move him to take a single step before the right and fitting time. Invariably we have acknowledged that he was right, and we wrong; that his slowness served the common need far better than our passion would have done. Gradually we had learned to trust him far more than ourselves in these grave problems of state.

We recognized that he would not act from impulse, that he had no pet schemes or theories to carry out, like most ambitious statesmen or wild philanthropists; that he would act when he did act, and move when he did move, in such a manner that we should be satisfied, and with such wisdom that he need not retrace his steps. Very rare and conspicuous was the judicial quality of his intellect.

Added to this confidence which we had learned to put in him, was our appreciation of his naturalness, simplicity, and unselfishness. He had that rare courage which kept him, amid all the conventionalities of court life, the same simple, unostentatious man, who went from Illinois four years ago. He dared to be himself!

All through these years he has been impressing it upon the American people, that a single honest heart is more to be depended on than all the politic diplomacy of the universe; until every man of humble place and honest purpose, throughout the land, felt that this simple minded, true-intentioned, straightforward President represented him, and was acting at the highest post in the nation as he himself would desire to act.

We were all sure that he had carried the principles of all true manliness—of all true religion, into a place where we had been unaccustomed to see them; that he was giving them the first place, where hitherto it had been supposed impracticable to give them more than some subordinate recognition; that he had placed moral greatness where it naturally belongs, above all other greatness. Politicians, and people generally had too commonly assumed that strict integrity of moral purpose was incompatible with the best diplomacy;

that public success is often attainable only through a temporary suppression of the loftiest sentiment and ingenuous methods;

that a crooked moral line is the shortest distance between two given points in the real progress of a people. The conspicuous and immortal success of this honest man is a divine revelation to the exact contrary.

I am sure that it is, at once, such a revelation as was chiefly needed, and which will be lost, either to the nation or to the world. Henceforth, if we are true to the lesson which God has written in the book of our own life, the cunning political maneuverer will be the second-rate statesman; the honest, ingenuous, morally courageous man, the first. How beautifully has been illustrated in him, that saying of Jesus "Thine eye be single thy whole body shall be full of light."

From first to last, amid the most unparalleled temptation, and unprecedented pressure, he has had but a single purpose—to be true, under God, to the life of this people, and at every successive step his career has been more and more luminous, until he has filled the very darkest corner of the land with the true light of life. He trusted God from day to day; did the present duty firmly and fearlessly, and always relied upon God to show him what to do next. There is but one way, oh friends, in which we can properly thank God for the life and memory of Abraham Lincoln; and that is by acting and being like him, as much as ever we can, wherever we are called to act or be. Do we not all know this and feel it? Let it be sure to us then a passing lesson.

I have said that it was more than the President whom the people loved; that they loved the Man. It was more than the Man they loved. In him they loved the Eternal. This deep-seated grief, which has rested upon the faces of all classes of people, has afforded me one of the strongest proofs I ever received of the people's capacity for appreciating those god-like qualities which are the very essence of Christianity—the perennial fountain of divinity in this human world, and the indestructible foundations of religion. We have loved in him the illustration of our noblest, loftiest, dearest ideas. He has been to us an exponent, not more of honesty, than of mercy, liberty, child-like trust in God, and uncompromised wisdom. He embodied our chiefest hope in God. In our first dismay it seemed as if the assassin had struck a blow not so much against a man as against these eternal ideas, as against the life of God. Nor was this far from the truth. It was because he did represent the living God, who is so quick and powerful by his word in the hearts of our people, that the powers of darkness wrought these base Northern traitors to the madness of their deed. They did strike less against flesh and blood than against the living God; the God who lives in you and me; and who, by this bereavement, are we not all conscious of it?—is calling us to a yet grander rally for the maintenance of those undying ideas with which he quickens these people.

It seemed to me friends, last Sunday morning, Easter Sunday morning, the morning when people celebrate the rise of Jesus from the dead, that our national saviour too, slain by the hands of cruel men, had also risen, even as Jesus arose, from the dead. It seemed to me that he was living more truly and gloriously than ever before; that he had found a triumphant resurrection in more than a thousand thousand hearts of living men who loved him; that although as an individual man he had passed out and rested from his labors, yet the great ideas which he so logically represented, and so calmly pursued, were never so strong and vital within us all before; that henceforth by our love of him, by our new necessity from his removal, we felt ourselves bound to stand yet more firmly for that broad-based justice, that lofty mercy, that general freedom, that country undivided, for which he gave himself so manfully, and for which, a martyr he died. That impression concerning his resurrection has not passed away. I still feel and know that in the renewed purpose of our hearts, in the increased unity of the nation, in the augmented loyalty of the land, in an uprising of fidelity to ideas and principles among all this people, our greatest statesmen, our providential and most illustrious man has arisen from all the power of death in a form glorious, incorruptible, whence his counsels shall rule us henceforth from the right hand of God. He went from us only to come more truly unto us. He was taken from men's sight only to take a stronger hold upon their hearts. Blessed be our God, who, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again in this so lively hope, by this last resurrection of the dead.

"Not upon us, or ours, the solemn angel

Hath evil brought!"

The friends of God are glad to say:

"The good die not."

God calls our great ones, but we lose not wholly

What He has given:

They are with us in thought and deed, as truly

As to His Heaven."

There is something very notable in the time in which this death, thus executed, was permitted to take place. Before the first inauguration, there were not wanting those who sought this man's life. At the second inauguration there was a prepared plot to compass his death. All through these years, the same black hatred has been seeking its opportunity to strike him down. Yet, until now, there had been hindrances, combinations of circumstances, various obstacles to prevent his removal from his post. We all perceive that this untimely end is indeed a most timely one; that if he must have been taken thus, at no previous hour could it have happened so well; that had it been four years ago, or four months ago, the disaster would have been incalculable; that there is a mysterious fitness in the time, as well as a blessing in the general result. We each are led to recognize the all-controlling Providence of God. Men everywhere, and of all shades of opinion, recognize it. Yet how differently is it interpreted. Men discern in it what they are capable of discerning. Much is said about this event as a special providence. This comes generally from those who either talk thoughtlessly, or who tacitly assume that God is with a nation only now and then. It is a special providence, but no more special than the descent of yesterday's snow, than the rising of this morning's sun, than my presence with you today. All providences are special. Whatever is, God attends to, and brings to pass, whether it be the germination of a grain of wheat, or the translation of such a man in such a manner. Instead of calling it special, in the sense of occasional, as though God were not always and everywhere present, it would be nearer exactness to call it a prominent or recognizable providence. It is one of those great events which all eyes may behold, and in which every person is interested. It is prominent and special only in its prominence.

It was more than the President the people loved, it was the Man. In these last four years how had we all learned to trust him. We have had our times of impatience, our months of murmuring, our seasons when our hearts rebelled at the steady patience of his lead; because our impulses, our heat, our clamorings could not move him to take a single step before the right and fitting time. Invariably we have acknowledged that he was right, and we wrong; that his slowness served the common need far better than our passion would have done. Gradually we had learned to trust him far more than ourselves in these grave problems of state.

We recognized that he would not act from impulse, that he had no pet schemes or theories to carry out, like most ambitious statesmen or wild philanthropists; that he would act when he did act, and move when he did move, in such a manner that we should be satisfied, and with such wisdom that he need not retrace his steps. Very rare and conspicuous was the judicial quality of his intellect.

Added to this confidence which we had learned to put in him, was our appreciation of his naturalness, simplicity, and unselfishness. He had that rare courage which kept him, amid all the conventionalities of court life, the same simple, unostentatious man, who went from Illinois four years ago. He dared to be himself!

All through these years he has been impressing it upon the American people, that a single honest heart is more to be depended on than all the politic diplomacy of the universe; until every man of humble place and honest purpose, throughout the land, felt that this simple minded, true-intentioned, straightforward President represented him, and was acting at the highest post in the nation as he himself would desire to act.

We were all sure that he had carried the principles of all true manliness—of all true religion, into a place where we had been unaccustomed to see them; that he was giving them the first place, where hitherto it had been supposed impracticable to give them more than some subordinate recognition; that he had placed moral greatness where it naturally belongs, above all other greatness. Politicians, and people generally had too commonly assumed that strict integrity of moral purpose was incompatible with the best diplomacy;

that public success is often attainable only through a temporary suppression of the loftiest sentiment and ingenuous methods;

that a crooked moral line is the shortest distance between two given points in the real progress of a people. The conspicuous and immortal success of this honest man is a divine revelation to the exact contrary.

I am sure that it is, at once, such a revelation as was chiefly needed, and which will be lost, either to the nation or to the world. Henceforth, if we are true to the lesson which God has written in the book of our own life, the cunning political maneuverer will be the second-rate statesman; the honest, ingenuous, morally courageous man, the first. How beautifully has been illustrated in him, that saying of Jesus "Thine eye be single thy whole body shall be full of light."

From first to last, amid the most unparalleled temptation, and unprecedented pressure, he has had but a single purpose—to be true, under God, to the life of this people, and at every successive step his career has been more and more luminous, until he has filled the very darkest corner of the land with the true light of life. He trusted God from day to day; did the present duty firmly and fearlessly, and always relied upon God to show him what to do next. There is but one way, oh friends, in which we can properly thank God for the life and memory of Abraham Lincoln; and that is by acting and being like him, as much as ever we can, wherever we are called to act or be. Do we not all know this and feel it? Let it be sure to us then a passing lesson.

I have said that it was more than the President whom the people loved; that they loved the Man. It was more than the Man they loved. In him they loved the Eternal. This deep-seated grief, which has rested upon the faces of all classes of people, has afforded me one of the strongest proofs I ever received of the people's capacity for appreciating those god-like qualities which are the very essence of Christianity—the perennial fountain of divinity in this human world, and the indestructible foundations of religion. We have loved in him the illustration of our noblest, loftiest, dearest ideas. He has been to us an exponent, not more of honesty, than of mercy, liberty, child-like trust in God, and uncompromised wisdom. He embodied our chiefest hope in God. In our first dismay it seemed as if the assassin had struck a blow not so much against a man as against these eternal ideas, as against the life of God. Nor was this far from the truth. It was because he did represent the living God, who is so quick and powerful by his word in the hearts of our people, that the powers of darkness wrought these base Northern traitors to the madness of their deed. They did strike less against flesh and blood than against the living God; the God who lives in you and me; and who, by this bereavement, are we not all conscious of it?—is calling us to a yet grander rally for the maintenance of those undying ideas

The Janesville Gazette.

Wants, Sales, Lets, &c.

WANTED!—To rent a house with six or eight rooms, convenient to the business part of the city. Enquire at Rock River Iron Works. march22dawt6510

FOR SALE!—I offer for sale my home on Main street. The grounds are well stocked with shrubbery and fruit. march22dawt6510

A. K. ALLEN.

FOR SALE!—Two full building lots in Dickson & Hause's addition, in the Third Ward. They will be sold at a great bargain. Inquire of D. C. Jayne, at the Post Office. march22dawt6510

PARTNER WANTED!—With capital of $500 or $1,000. Personal attention may or may not be given. Address, Box 356, Postoffice, Janesville, Wis.

DWELLING HOUSE FOR SALE!—Only one block from the Post Office, on North Second street, in the Second Ward. Two good barns on the land. Inquire of H. A. VOSBURG. march22dawt6510

BUILDING AND OTHER LOTS.—For sale at very low prices, on liberal terms of credit, several desirable lots in the city of Janesville, situated in Rockport and in Belmont's Addition. Apply to H. C. COOPER. march22dawt6510

SCHOOL AND UNIVERSITY LANDS.—Any person wishing to pay interest, taxes, or principal on Lands described in the State of Wisconsin, can do so through the Rock County National Bank without charge. march22dawt6510

HOUSE FOR SALE!—The subscriber being about to leave this city, hereby offers his house for sale, situated within 3 minutes walk of the Post Office. Will be sold cheap. Terms apply to H. P. MORAN, at Smith & Ross' Block. march22dawt6510

FOR SALE!—23 wood lots situated near Foothills, Rock county. All 20 by 100 feet, each suitable for a farm, having wood heat and water convenient. These lands are known as the "Foothills tract." Terms, wood lots cash; farming land & forest, 10 per cent, and balance of payment on 1st serial terms. Apply to J. J. BROWN. march22dawt6510

TO RENT!—For one or more years, the brick building immediately opposite the Lawyer House, the very best location in the city for the purpose for which it was erected. It contains a Blacksmith Shop, with four forges, Wagon Shop and large room over the outer building used for a paint shop. For terms &c., see MCKEE & BRO., Janesville. march22dawt6510

TIMBER LOT FOR SALE!—The timber lot is located in the quarter of section 10, town 3, range 12, about one-half mile from the town of Janesville, will be sold at a fair price, and on easy terms. Also a choice Building Lot in the same village. Inquire of the subscriber at the First National Bank. march22dawt6510

FOR SALE CHEAP!—My property situated on Milwaukee street, near Simon's dwelling houses, is good, also a large amount of varied fruit and shrubbery. march22dawt6510

Also, a farm of 15 acres, well fenced, with dwelling house and out-buildings, on Rock Prairie, 2½ miles northeast from city limits. Also, a good flock of 120 sheep. march22dawt6510

Subscription Agent, Jay Cooke, Philadelphia.

NOTICED SALE!—The splendid stock of Evergreens and Ornamental Trees and Shrubs, at the Rock County Nursery, are now offered for sale at very reasonable prices and must be sold. The lot of 20 acres on which the nursery stands will be sold on reasonable terms. For trees &c., call at the Mercury 12, mile South of the Fair Grounds, or apply to J. A. Johnson, for price of land, or by letter to C. Colby, South Prairie. march22dawt6510

N—B.—These trees, &c., have been four times transplanted and have matted fibrous roots and have not even been pruned; stand from three to ten feet high and are planted symmetrically. Liberal deduction made for late lots. march22dawt6510

SPLENDID FARM FOR SALE!—Pleasantly located on the road to the city limits of Janesville, one mile south of the city limits of Janesville, the farm is well broken up, and half of which is meadow and pasture, and the rest under cultivation. The buildings are new, convenient and commodious. The barn is 50 by 60, granary 20 by 26, dwelling 20 by 40, stable 12 by 20, and there is a large amount of trees and shrubbery with fruit, etc. It is known to be a very desirable location. For particular application, call at the Fife & Greco's, first and third doors west of the Main Street, Rockville Bank of Janesville, or to the subscriber on the premises. march22dawt6510

JENNER KIMBALL, Postoffice box 501, Janesville. march22dawt6510

A TWO'D'S PATENT DRILLING MACHINE, PILE DRIVER, AND HYDRAULIC SAND PUMP.

PRACTICAL TESTS kindly fully demonstrated the superiority of this machine over all others for the purpose of sinking Oil Wells; the subscriber is now prepared to receive orders for the same.

This machinery comprises everything requisite for the boring of oil wells, excepting the STEAM ENGINE AND CAST IRON DRIVING PIPE, (but will be furnished, at a reasonable price), and dispenses with the use of the Derrick Rope, Bell wheel and other cumbersome and expensive fixtures now in use, and is so arranged, being constructed on wheels and portable, that it can easily be removed for the purpose of sinking wells in different localities.

ETHE DITRIBUTOR is removed from the well by our Patent Hydraulic process, and does not require the removal of the drill from the boring. This process no longer removes all the dirt, in from 5 to 10 minutes, but however effectively clears out and opens all the small oil veins that are often entirely closed up by the old process of sand pumping.

WITH THIS MACHINE and a practical engineer, a well can be sunk from 400 to 600 feet within a period of from 15 to 20 days after the soil pipe has been driven.

Arrangements are being made for the construction and delivery of three machines at New York, Norwich Newburg, N. Y., and Pittsburg Penn.

For further information write, Dr. V. CLARENCE PRICE.

DR. V. CLARENCE PRICE.

The only Physician of his kind in the West, has met with the greatest success, gained a better reputation, effected more complete cures, and placed the largest number in his hands, than any physician that has ever practised them all, and is commended for his skill in treating all chronic diseases of the STOMACH, LIVER, KIDNEYS, BLADDER, WOMB, BLOOD, AFFECTIONS OF THE URINARY ORGANS, GRANUL, SCROFULA, RHEUMATISM, CATARRH, BROCHITIS, HYPERPSIS, AC.

One of the most complete experiments, but of twenty years standing, has been made by him, and he has knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of these diseases exclusively, no encouragement whatever is given to practice, and nothing is said of a prospect. Call him in our opinions, reasonable, he is a man, who is not afraid of trying, or cure everybody, but do him justice, to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call, investigate before they abandon hope, he will give you a full account of himself, and will cost nothing as consultation is free. I have had a year that I have visited this place and shall make my visits for years regularly on the same days of the week every year.

He is located at Janesville, Hyatt House, on Saturday and Sunday, the 27th and 28th of May, 1865. Residue and Latory, Waukegan, Illinois, where all letters should be sent. march22dawt6510

NEW MILLINERY!

Ladies, Attention!

MISS C. BAIRD & CO.,

Would call the attention of the ladies of Janesville and vicinity to the fact that they have fitted up the room formerly occupied by Ellis & Fife's, opposite the American House, and have opened a large and well selected stock of purchased in New York at Gold Value, and will be sold accordingly.

RICH MILLINERY GOODS,

BONNETS AND HATS

Altered and dressed in the latest styles.

DRESS AND CLOAK MAKING

Done in the best manner, and satisfaction guaranteed.

THE "EXCELSIOR" SYSTEM

Of Dress cutting taught. Ladies give us a call and we trust you cannot fail to be pleased.

C. BAIRD & CO.

Janesville, April 20th, 1865. march22dawt6510

Miscellaneous.

Miscellaneous.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths percent interest, per annum, known as the "7-30 loan."

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of August 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent.

Gold-Bearing Bonds

These bonds are now worth a premium of nine per cent, including gold interest from Nov., which makes the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, at current rates, including interest, about ten per cent, per annum, besides its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds, from one, to three per cent, more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent per day on $20 more.

Two cents " " $100 "

Ten " " $500 "

20 " " $1000 "

$1 " " $3000 "

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions. This is now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantages will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

THE ONLY LOAN IN MARKET

Less than $200,000 remain unsold, which will probably be disposed of within the next 60 or 90 days, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case in closing the subscriptions to other loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscriptions at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

JAY COOKE, Subscription Agent, Philadelphia.

Subscriptions will be received by the FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Janesville.

ROCK COUNTY NATIONAL BANK of Janesville.

At least

25 PER CENT.!

AND WE SHALL KEEP OUR PRICES

BELOW ANY HOUSE

IN THIS CITY.

NOTWITHSTANDING ALL THE

BLOWING

THAT MAY BE DONE!

WE ARE NOW SELLING

GOOD BROWN SHEETING AT 20 CENTS PER YARD.

GOOD BLEACHED SHEETING AT 20 CENTS PER YARD.

GOOD DELAINES AT 25 CENTS PER YARD.

Merchant Tailoring

DEPARTMENT!

CLOTHS,

CASSIMERES,

AND VESTINGS!

IN THIS DEPARTMENT WE HAVE THIS DAY

Reduced our Prices for Making Garments to Order

Twenty Per Cent.

Our stock of CLOTHS is far superior to any stock in this city.

SMITH & BOSTWICK,

March 22, 1865. march22dawt6510

JUST RECEIVED!

NEW STYLES

Cloths & Fancy Cassimeres!

FOR Spring Garments!

CALL AND SEE THEM

AT

ECHLIN & FOOTE'S,

WEST MILWAUKEE STREET.

Pants and Vest to Match!

A FINE ASSORTMENT FROM

New Spring Goods,

CUT WELL, MADE WELL,

And the most desirable garments in the market.

— ECHLIN & FOOTE,

East and West Milwaukee Street.

march22dawt6510

LADIES PAPER COLLARS AND CUFFS.—

A FINE STOCK!

ECHLIN & FOOTE,

East and West Milwaukee Street.

march22dawt6510

Fancy and White Paper Collars!

The Best Stock in the City!

ECHLIN & FOOTE.

East and West Milwaukee Street.

march22dawt6510

OLD WINES AND LIQUORS for

Medicinal purposes, warranted pure, and safe, at the PHILADELPHIA DRUGSTORE.

Photographs pasted in all styles. Pictures for sale on reasonable terms. Cash soon. march22dawt6510

Dry Goods.

ONE MORE

GREAT PANIC

IN THE

Dry Goods Trade,

AT THE

NEW YORK CASH STORE.

—

Special Notices.

REMOVAL.

Da. M. E. SHINERON has removed to Jackman & Smith's New Building, over the Rock County Bank, where he will wait upon his friends and customers in his department of dentistry.

—
HAIR DYE! HAIR DYE!

Bacheler's Hair Dye is the best in the world. The only true and perfect Dye—Harmless—Instantaneous and Brilliant—produces a splendid Black or Natural Brown—removes the ill effects of Bad Dyes, and immediately restores the original color. Sold by all Drug-gists. The genuine, signed, W. A. Bacheler, and firmly sealed.

John W. WINANS, Attorney and Counsellor at Law, office under Central Bank, Janesville, Wis.

JOSEPH C. COLE, Attorney and Counsellor at Law, office in Lappin's Block, Janesville, Wis.

J. H. BARROWS, Physician and Surgeon, office and residence corner of Archibald and Jones Streets, Janesville, Wis.

H. E. JOHNSON, Dentist, "me in Janesville a Smith's block, over the Rock County Bank, Janesville, Wis.

JOHN W. WINANS, Attorney and Counsellor at Law, office under Central Bank, Janesville, Wis.

JOHN W. WINANS, Attorney and Counsellor at Law, office under Central Bank, Janesville, Wis.

A REMEDY FOR THE PILES.

It is a blessing to the suffering to know that we have an effectual cure for this truly troublesome disease. Mr. J. P. Hazard, of 164 Second street, Cincinnati, Ohio, takes great pleasure in informing all who are suffering with piles that he used a small quantity of Dr. Strickland's Pile Remedy, and it effected a permanent cure. This seems to be the case with all who make use of this splendid preparation. It is manufactured at No. 9 East Fourth street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and sold by all Drug-gists.

WM. BUCHER general agent for Wisconsin.

E. F. COLWELL wholesale agent for Wisconsin.

—
COLGATE'S HONEY SOAP.

This celebrated Toilet Soap, in such universal demand, is made from the choicest materials, is mild and excellent in its nature, fragrantly scented, and extremely beneficial in its action upon the skin. For sale by all Drug-gists and Fancy goods dealers.

—
Janesville.

COUPON FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

—
CONSUMPTION.

CONSUMPTION.